

The Trouble With Sunscreen Solved!!

- 1. I don't like the way sunscreen smells: Choose products labeled “unscented” or “fragrance-free”. Products formulated for sensitive skin also often have less fragrance.
- 2. Sunscreen makes my skin feel greasy: Choose oil-free, water-based or alcohol-based products. Many products claim “dry-touch” or “non-greasy” on the label.
- 3. I have sensitive skin: Choose a sunscreen made for sensitive skin or for babies. Look for products that contain only zinc oxide and/or titanium dioxide as active ingredients. These non-chemical minerals rarely irritate sensitive skin.
- 4. I can't reapply sunscreen over my makeup: It's important to reapply sunscreen when you're outside. This can be tricky if you wear makeup. Choose a powder or foundation with a sun protection factor (SPF) of 15 or higher. That way, quick midday reapplication is easy.
- 5. I sweat sunscreen off: Choose a sunscreen claiming to be “very water resistant” or “very sweat resistant”. These products often have the word “Sport” on the labeling. These products must still be reapplied often to be effective if you are sweating a lot.
- 6. Sunscreen makes my face break out: Choose oil-free products specially made for the face. It may help to wash the sunscreen off when you come inside. Just make sure you always reapply 20-30 minutes before you go back outside!
- 7. Sunscreen stings my eyes when I sweat: Try a stick sunscreen on your forehead and around your eyes. These products have more of a waxy consistency and are less likely to run. Never put sunscreen directly on the eye area. Protect the skin around your eyes with sunglasses instead.
- 8. I won't get a tan if I use sunscreen: Tanned skin is damaged skin. If you want to look tan, choose a self-tanning lotion or bronzer from a department store or drug store. There are also salons that offer spray-on tans. These will give your skin a tanned look without the damage.
